Polka-dot plant and coleus. 10 or more $4.50, 100 or more $3.95. How I grow in 100+ Degree Weather without a Shade Cloth & More.

Woodland Wildflowers for part to full shade. Many of Seed, 5g $10.00, 25g $36.00, 100g $115.00 Bareroot*, $4.90, another list for growing plants Grows to 60 or 100 centimetres. 10 Plants That Will Grow in the Shade Dengarden – Ballyrobert Gardens 15 Jul 2017. My lists of great shade-loving plants — one for dappled or thin shade, and Astilbe. Digitalis (Foxglove). Hakonechloa (Japanese forest grass). Primula (Primrose). Plants – Tagged full shade tall, slender stems. Lamium maculatum (Dead nettle). Tiarella cordifolia (Foamflower). Pulmonaria (Lungwort). heuchera, it’s the foliage that provides the visual excitement, though some varieties also have showy flowers on

There are many options for growing plants in shade. Here are some examples of shade-tolerant plants that are popular among gardeners:

- Shade-tolerant flowers include bleeding hearts, astilbe, and heuchera.
- Shade-tolerant shrubs include hydrangea, viburnum, and cotoneaster.
- Shade-tolerant perennials include astilbe, hosta, and bleeding hearts.
- Shade-tolerant vines include clematis and wisteria.

Shade plants can be a challenge to grow, but with the right conditions and care, they can thrive. Make sure to consider the light requirements of any plant you choose for your garden.

Perennials

- Hosta (Lamium): A shade-loving perennial with attractive, sword-like leaves and showy flower spikes in late spring. It thrives in part to full shade in moist, well-drained soil.
- Digitalis (Foxglove): A hardy perennial with tall, slender stems and showy flowers in a variety of colors. It prefers part to full shade and well-drained soil.
- Astilbe: A hardy, low-maintenance perennial with feathery foliage and showy flower plumes. It thrives in part to full shade and moist soil.

Shrubs

- Hydrangea: A beautiful shrub with large flower clusters in shades of blue, pink, or white. It prefers part to full shade and moist soil.
- Viburnum: A hardy shrub with showy flower clusters in spring and fall. It thrives in part to full shade and well-drained soil.
- Cotoneaster: A hardy shrub with bright red berries and showy flowers. It prefers part to full shade and well-drained soil.

These are just a few examples of the many shade-tolerant plants available for your garden. With a little research and planning, you can create a beautiful, low-maintenance shade garden that will thrive in your conditions.