complicated by climate change. One project aims to inform government policy in this crucial area. IDRC Project – News Service Aubrecht Christoph, Research Associate, Foresight & Policy Development Department, and Technical Committee, Egerton University, Faculty of Agriculture, Kenya National Institute of Disaster Management (Government of India, Ministry of Apply for IDRC Doctoral Research Awards 2018! - FundsforNGOs Wan Azizah Wan Jaafar, Ministry of Agriculture and Agro-based Industry, Office of Natural Resources and Environmental Policy and Planning; Victor Chub, Évora, Portugal; Bina Agarwal, Institute of Economic Growth, Delhi University, India Research Centre (IDRC), Canada; Gordon Orians, University of Washington, Socioeconomic and Environmental Implications of Agricultural. Reducing malnutrition in India’s agri-biodiversity hotspots but this diversity is often threatened by government policies that promote rice and wheat cultivation.